factsheet

getting to tetiaroa

The private atoll of Tetiaroa is part of the Windward Islands in the Society Archipelago and is located about 60 kilometers/30 miles north of Tahiti. Air Tetiaroa operates the spectacular 20-minute flight from Tahiti Faa'a International Airport, with a fleet of two 6-passenger Britten-Norman aircrafts and two 14-seater Twin Otters. Charter flights via Ecureuil bi-turbine helicopter are also available. Departure is from the Air Tetiaroa Terminal. Upon arrival in Tetiaroa, guests are greeted on the runway of the private airfield by a Brando representative and whisked off to their villa in comfortable electric carts.

an enchanting atoll of twelve islets

The Brando is much more than a hotel. It is the stuff of Robinson Crusoe, of the childhood desert island fantasies that most of us share. Marlon Brando made that dream his own and resolved that Tetiaroa would retain its beauty forever. Tetiaroa is alive with history and energy. Over 4 kilometers wide (2.5 miles), it comprises twelve motu (coral islands, or islets) surrounded by a splendid turquoise lagoon. The motus are a study in diversity. The Brando itself sits on the 78-hectares (193-acres) Motu Onetahi. Motu Honuea boasts superb white sand beaches; Tiaraunu, the largest motu, wears a dense mantle of coconut trees. A nursery of lemon sharks makes its home in the very north, where the three motus Tauini, Tauroa and Hiraanae are separated only by small hoa, or channels. On Oroatera you will find paradisiacal beaches and a natural watering place in the shape of a seahorse. The birds come to nest on Tahuna Iti and Tahuna Rahi, true sanctuaries. Aie is the smallest motu ; Reiono is the only islet that has preserved its primary forest. It is also the habitat of the « Kaveu, » the coconut crab. Finally, it is on Rimatu'u that the first Europeans settled, establishing a coconut plantation, a village and a landing stage

an extraordinary destiny

The Pomare family, kings of Tahiti, made Tetiaroa their private residence long before Marlon Brando fell in love with it during the filming of « Mutiny on the Bounty ». Rocked by the rhythm of a translucent lagoon, witness to mysterious rituals in its endemic forests, Tetiaroa exerts a fascination on all who visit. Even today, Polynesians still have a special respect for this island populated by vestiges of marae (temples) built by the first residents and where «spirits» wander.

Marlon Brando purchased the island of Tetiaroa in 1966. Keenly aware of the spectacular legacy he held in his hands, he wanted to pass along the experience of the island paradise to people who share his vision: to make Tetiaroa a protected site, offering luxury of an astonishing biodiversity to a handful of curious people. The alchemy of authenticity, simplicity, environmental and technical innovation and understated elegance makes The Brando an unrivalled place. This is the promise kept by the Pacific Beachcomber Group, which inaugurated The Brando on July 1, 2014.

The Brando offers 36 private villas, with one to three bedrooms, overlooking Turtle Beach and Mermaid Bay, including the private residence Teremoana on Prince Square.

Conceived by architect Pierre-Jean Picard in collaboration with designer Gilles Leborgne, all have in common the space and references to Polynesian traditions. The wooden walls and roofs covered with pandanus leaves are inspired by traditional techniques and materials. Large bay windows offer a divine view of the lush garden planted with coconut palms and «miki miki», as well as the private swimming pools and the azure blue lagoon. Nature gently insinuates herself into the sober and serene interiors. Studied comfort and purity of line reflect the refinement of the property.

Each villa has a spacious bedroom and a dressing room, a living room, media room, and a WiFi and BlueTooth connection. The bathroom offers an outdoor bathtub nestled in the heart of a tropical garden. A HOTEL with A SUSTAINABLE mindset

Wishing to preserve the atoll in its original state and wanting to set an example to the rest of the world in terms of luxury, The Brando has taken a focused approach to the entirety of design, materials and services.

We have implemented numerous innovative programs and use state-of-the-art technologies to achieve our objectives of carbon neutrality, while ensuring optimal comfort. The Brando has thus obtained LEED Platinum certification, justifying the highest possible level of effort in the construction of a low-carbon property.

The SWAC (Sea Water Air Conditioning), which draws deep sea water (930 meters / 3,000 feet below sea level) to cool the air and provide thermal comfort in all the resort's buildings, results in the reduction of energy consumption by almost 90%.

The Brando ensures reasoned use of its freshwater resources. Rainwater feeds swimming pools and laundries ; desalinated sea water is used in the bathrooms ; and an ingenious wastewater recycling system is used to irrigate gardens and the vegetable garden.

Along with its water conservation policy, the hotel has implemented a major waste recycling and composting program.

Solar energy, produced by 4,000 photovoltaic panels located along the runway, covers 75% of the resort's energy needs. These panels demonstrate how productive an unused space can be. Solar water heaters, meanwhile, satisfy almost all hot water needs from the hotel.

Rechargeable batteries of solar energy are produced using recyclable materials. They are able to provide thousands of complete charge cycles.

Guests have bicycles to get around the resort, or can be driven by a team member in electric carts.

The hotel has a vegetable garden and a organic orchard, using ancestral methods to produce exceptionally high-quality fruits and vegetables despite a coral soil. This is where our Chef finds his inspiration. Thus, our restaurants offer a wonderful variety of fruits and vegetables, all grown just footsteps away: papayas, bananas, lemons, tomatoes, beans, edible flowers, lettuce, uru (breadfruit), vanilla, eggplant, zucchini, green onions, radish, basil...

The Brando proudly produces one of the best honeys from around the world, made from coconut blossoms and other species endemic to the atoll. 70 beehives are spread over three motu and produce 1,200 kilos (2,600 lbs.) of honey per year on average. Tetiaroa honey is harvested regularly by the beekeeper and used to enhance our cocktails, dishes and pastries.

Tetiaroa is fringed with coconut palms, paradisiacal beaches and islets with primary forest. Populated by native species (eagle rays, parrot fish, lemon sharks, turtles and many others) and an exceptional coral reef, Tetiaroa is a natural paradise of which we must take the greatest care. To do this, Tetiaroa Society, a non-profit association dedicated to the protection and conservation of the atoll, as well as to the understanding and management of marine ecosystems, is involved in various conservation and research programs.

To make Marlon Brando's dream of a working ocean laboratory come true, the hotel hosts an ecostation dedicated to research and managed by Tetiaroa Society. The ecostation, which can accommodate a dozen researchers from around the world, includes aquariums, bookstores and, above all, a laboratory where scientists conduct research in order to protect and safeguard tropical atolls and their wildlife. For guests who want to know more and interact with scientists, the Green Tour offered by the resort stops at the ecostation. Tetiaroa Society is currently engaged in these programs :

Ocean acidification study: its goal is to study the functioning of coral reefs and ways that we can protect them from global climate change.

Monitoring green turtles: carried out in collaboration with the association Te Mana o te Moana, this operation protects green sea turtles, who come to nest on Motu Onetahi. During the egg-laying season, the guests can wake up in the wee hours of the morning (if they wish) to watch nesting activity.

Lagoon protection: repopulating the lagoon of Tetiaroa by raising and releasing fish and crustaceans that have been caught at the post-larval stage (fishing is prohibited throughout the lagoon).

Ecological restoration program of Tetiaroa: conducted with specialists in invasive species from around the world, this program aims to eradicate rats from the atoll to protect endemic species.

Mosquito population control: an innovative project carried out with the Louis Mallardé Institute of Tahiti, which consists in releasing sterilized males on the atoll, so as to contain reproduction.

Mapping and archaeological restoration: archaeologists from French Polynesia, New Zealand and the United States are working together to preserve Tetiaroa's cultural sites.

Restoration of the village of Rimatu'u: its goal is to bring history to life by restoring a village which was inhabited until the sixties for copra production.
